Aladdin is Here!

«Hey! My name is Mena Massoud, and I just wanted to confirm my participation in El Gouna Film Festival this year, in September of 2019. I'm going to be there, and I think it's going to be a fantastic festival. So, can't wait!» Those were the words on a Facebook post by the Egyptian-Canadian film actor. Massoud is known for his leading role in Aladdin (2019) by Guy Ritchie, starring Will Smith. Massoud will be the guest of the third edition of GFF.

Intishal Al Timimi, Festival Director, states: "GFF is an international festival that is based in the Arab region; its identity heavily depends on the balance between its international, Arab, and Egyptian aspects. Thus, the international success of an Arab filmmaker is an opportunity to celebrate Arab filmmakers everywhere." He explained, saying that the festival also has invited North American-Egyptian stars Rami Malek. So far, Massoud's schedule is flexible enough to allow him to attend the Festival. For Malek, he might be currently busy working on his new role in No Time to Die.

Visit Ihsan Abdel Quddous' Home

Those who are familiar with the works of the late prominent Egyptian short story writer, novelist, and journalist Ihsan Abdel Quddous –either by reading his books or watching many films based on his work– will discover a different and interesting part of his life at the third edition of GFF.

On the 20th of September, an exhibition will be held at the TU Berlin as part of the festival's celebration of Abdel Quddous' 100th birth anniversary. The exhibition will showcase many of the personal items that belonged to the writer, borrowed from the house where he lived most of his life.

The exhibited items includes the wooden desk where he used to write his literature, and portraits drawn for him by many of the most talented Egyptian artists, which were hanged at his house in Zamalak. The exhibition also showcases originals of the first editions of his books, and original posters of his films. Many more secrets and surprises will be revealed in time. Ahmed Abdel Quddous, the younger son of the late writer, stated that it is the first time that his father's items are to be showcased in a museum-like exhibition. He commented: "I hope that this exhibit at El Gouna Film Festival highlights the importance of preserving our great artists' legacy and I am proud of this step."

Throughout our preparation journey for this exhibition, we discovered a treasure trove of Abdel Quddous' personal belongings, such as exquisite furniture, magnificent paintings, the author's prestigious certificates of appreciation, handwritten documents from his collection of fiction and journalistic works, rare photographs, and many more. This discovery promises to create a rich collection for an exceptional exhibition, which will take place from September 21 to 27, 2019, at the TU Berlin El Gouna Campus.

Old is Gold

This year, the special presentations program focuses on film restoration, which is also a topic of an open discussion during the festival. Five restored films will be screened in the program: 'Caméra d'Afrique' by Féréid Boughedir, 'Stolen Kisses' by François Truffaut, 'Central Station' by Walter Salles, 'The Spider's Stratagem' by Bernardo Bertolucci, and 'The White Sheik' by Federico Fellini. Amir Ramses, the Artistic Director of the festival says "Restoration is a very important matter, and I believe it started to gain momentum again after the restoration of Youssef Chahine's films. But he was lucky with the co-production, and the attention paid by his family to his legacy. This is not the case with everyone. What will happen to the rest of the 3000 Egyptian films? It is part of our legacy; part of the human legacy. Who will take care of it? I believe it is very important to talk about that."
